129 plans

Engineer Norman Mitchell points to plans of proposed improvements for Route 129 in Wilmington, which were displayed at a public hearing last Thursday evening. Mitchell's pointer is at the west end of the project, near Avco. Moving to the right, the plans show the relocation of Woburn Street, the relocation of West Street, and the new interchange at Route 93.

West Street north not essential for 129

When Route 129 is finally rebuilt, do not expect West Street on the north side of Route 129 to be included in the job.

At a final design hearing last Thursday night, residents of the area firmly opposed inclusion of the new section of West Street, north of Route 129. Officials, in turn, said that it would not be built.

"This section is not necessary for the function of Route 129," said Norman Mitchell, an engineer for Barnes & Janis, consulting engineers on the job. "We have informed the selectmen that if they do not want it built, the department will not build it."

Peter Hayes of 75 West St. wanted to know "How do we get this thing off the map?" He was disturbed that even with officials telling him that the road would not be built, the map still showed West Street running through his yard.

One man who was quite upset about the plans for Route 129 was John Forrest, the proprietor of the Mobil station at the corner of Route 129 and West Street. He learned that in addition to there being a median strip preventing left turns into his business, there would also be a curb preventing Polls open 10 a.m. Saturday

How do you feel about self-service gas stations? Should a "field house" be built at Wilmington High School? And should Wilmington modify its zoning by-laws, changing the age of eligibility for housing for the elderly from 65 to 62?

These non-binding referenda will be facing voters at the polls Saturday, along with the selection of candidates for public office. The polls will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. All six of Wilmington's precincts vote at the high school gymnasium.

A hot race for housing authority holds the center of interest, with incumbent George Hooper facing challengers Dan Gillis and Elmer Parker.

Incumbent selectmen Dan Ballou and John Imbimbo are in a three-way race for two seats, facing Bob Doucette as a challenger.

Other offices on the ballot are two school committee seats, a seat on the regional technical school committee, moderator, and redevelopment authority.

Weekend volunteers to fence ballfield

Spring is the season in which baseball teams are either practicing or starting their seasons. This weekend, though, several teams will be busy with other activities. They will be hard at work at the Glen Road School field, installing a new fence.

The field has been turned over to the Wilmington Recreation Commission, by vote of the Board of Selectmen. Commission member Jack Cushing has secured a $5000 donation from the Wilmington Rotary Club to pay for improvements at the field, and he has lined up plenty of volunteer labor to do the work.

The weekend project will be in progress on both Saturday and Sunday, as well as Monday, if more time is needed. Cushing said he intends to fence the perimeter of the large field, to prevent motor bikes and cars from driving across the field. In the past, considerable damage has been caused to the fields by such vehicles.

Cushing intends to build two baseball fields and two softball fields. The area now has two ballfields and a tennis court.

The new ballfields will be for use primarily by youth groups, including the girls Little League softball team. Previously the fields had been under the control of the schools, and were used extensively by an industrial league.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WILMINGTON RESIDENTS

Dear Friends, Neighbors and Fellow Taxpayers,

Although most of you know that there has been a virtual "war" in our town over housing during the past few years, or rather the lack of it, this letter is mainly addressed to those of you who may be new in town or may not know what has been happening.

First of all, I firmly believe we do need housing, but as a resident and taxpayer I would like to see responsible housing, presented by someone we can trust and believe.

I have attended several Housing Authority meetings in the past, relative to a proposed housing project, along with several other residents, many of whom had serious concerns. I was amazed to see the lack of respect shown to these people by the incumbent, Mr. George Hooper. I am not afraid to state publicly that I believe this man has continually and consciously misled the public. Just one small example of this was in a recent Town Crier ad when he tried to take credit for the proposed sewer extension to Deming Way, when in fact that proposal was authored by a selectman at a selectmen's meeting.

Even though he has been quite successful in suppressing the public in the past, this is a democracy and he can NOT stop you from voting. Saturday, April 16 for the candidate of YOUR choice. Thank you very much for your time.

Sincerely
Robin Theodos

Officer's problems stemmed from Vietnam

A Middlesex Superior Court judge has ruled that Vietnam service related stress, and not the stress of police work, caused problems which led Dennis Rooney to seek retirement from the Wilmington Police Department.

Rooney had sued town manager Buzz Stapczynski, seeking hospital and medical expenses and lost pay, based on what Rooney claimed to be a psychological disability which arose from incidents involving teenagers.

In his decision, Justice Andrew G. Meyer gave the opinion that the town was not liable, under Chapter 41 of the General Laws, for Rooney's lost pay or medical expenses. He gave the opinion that Rooney has a valid service-connected disability.

Meyer's 18-page decision gives a detailed picture of the case, including a recap of Rooney's Vietnam experiences.

Rooney survived a plane crash and repeated enemy attacks in which many of his friends were killed. The decision also mentions many incidents which Rooney recounted from his service as a Wilmington police officer, which Rooney claimed led to his psychological disability.

The town manager said that the case is significant, because there are at present, several other cases in Massachusetts where Vietnam veterans are pressing similar disability claims.

Stapczynski said that Justice Meyer's decision was also noteworthy, in that it explored thoroughly Rooney's problems, and gave a ruling in favor of the town, while going to great lengths to understand Rooney.

On page 14 of the ruling, Justice Meyer writes: "Dennis Rooney carries mental and emotional wounds from the Vietnam War just as painful as any of the physical wounds. He is a casualty, not of police work, but of a cruel, fierce, thankless war. Like many another Vietnam veteran, he is now among us as a 'walking wounded.'"

Justice Meyer's writing continues: "Much has been said about Dennis Rooney as a man. His character deserves some comment since it reflects on his credibility. I found Dennis Rooney to be courageous and a patriot, truthful, and, strangely enough, conscientious. On occasions both in the Marines and as a police, he broke rules and made mistakes. His behavior as a policeman was frequently inappropriate. He over reacted. He was physical when he should have been restrained, at times he dealt poorly with teenagers and their parents.

But dealing with juvenile delinquents is a tricky job at best."

Justice Meyer had to evaluate the testimony of several psychiatrists, and he ultimately found Dr. James G. Beck to be a more credible expert than the other men.

According to Meyer's writing, Dr. Beck examined Rooney in February and September, 1982. Rooney told Beck that when a helicopter — long after the war — would pass overhead, it would trigger a flashback of Vietnam. He also told Beck that when as a policeman he had a confrontation with a teenager, his mind would "jump back to Vietnam" for no apparent reason. He still has nightmares about his Vietnam experiences.

Barrett issues endorsement

State Rep. Michael Barrett has issued the following endorsement in the Wilmington Housing Authority race:

I have been very interested in the debate over housing in Wilmington because the same debate is taking place in every community in the area. The issue is not personalities. The issue is the fact that a lot of Wilmington families, North Reading families, Reading families, Tewksbury families can no longer afford to purchase homes in their own communities.

George Hooper appears to have recognized this key fact. That is why I am endorsing him for the office.

I guess I see the issue a little personally, because I am a renter myself. I cannot afford to purchase housing in my own home town.

I am sure that the other gentlemen in the race are fine people. I hope my respect for Hooper's courage on the housing question is not interpreted as a criticism of them, but George is the incumbent. He is also a constituent of mine. He has raised the need for both elderly and family housing dwellings in town, and I think he would pursue the matter with due respect for Wilmington's traditions and atmosphere.

I don't mean to endorse any particular site for housing in Wilmington. That choice has to be made in a manner that is sensitive to issues of traffic, wetlands and everything else. But there is a very important principle involved, and George Hooper stands for it.

That principle is that the Town of Wilmington must tackle this tough question of housing its moderate and low income families, and its elderly citizens.

State aid figures set

The local aid, from the state house, does not appear to be planning to give Wilmington much assistance. Local aid is the phrase that legislators use about "I can get you help from the State House."

Papers being circulated in the state house show that, for Wilmington, the proposed addition to local aid for Wilmington for Fiscal year 1984, will be $268,401. That money is to be added to the sum which was given to Wilmington for Fiscal Year 1983, which ends on the first of July.

Approximately $168,000 is the "nut" for Wilmington for 1984. The exact cost has not yet been figured, and cannot be until after the Town Meeting is completed and other points have been worked over.

An inspection of the figures shows that they seem to be "loaded" in favor of the large cities. Boston is proposed to get an additional $30 million, Lynn, $4.5 million, Brockton $4.3 million and Lowell $2.4 million.

Tewksbury, by the same token, is to get an increase of $477,673.

One of the proposals is to spend a portion of the "Megabucks" money for library aid, and for MBTA bills. Two point five million would be divided up among the cities and towns for library aid.

Four point one million would be used to reimburse cities and towns for costs assessed by the MBTA when there is no such service to that town.

The additional aid, $145 million, is to be divided, according to the printed formula so as to assist in the funding of Chapter 70, which is aid for public schools.

Several changes are being proposed, in line with the new legislation being proposed.

One of the changes being proposed would change the date for fixing assessments on property. Instead of occurring on January 1, such assessments would occur on July 1.

It is also proposed to have legislation which will allow communities which have a heavy loss in Fiscal Year 1984 to spread that loss over two years. This would be by vote of the town meeting, or by the city council.

County tax reduced

The Middlesex County Commissioners have reduced the payment, in monies owed by the cities and towns to the county for the second half of fiscal year 1983.

There is an additional surplus of money on hand from the previous year's budget, the commissioners have stated. The amount of necessary spending for the present year was lower than had been initially anticipated. This amount further reduced the total payment of all cities and towns in the county by almost 15 percent when compared to the fiscal 1982 assessment.

The commissioners say they can provide the necessary services to the cities and towns at a lower rate than they initially intended on spending. In cooperation with the Middlesex County Advisory Board, they expect a further reduction in the County assessment for the fiscal year 1984.

For Wilmington the savings for the second half of the year is $8,241, an adjustment from $142,835 to $134,593.

For Tewksbury the savings for the second half of the year is $8,068.27. This is based on an adjustment from $139,824.55 to $131,756.28.

Minutemen ready for annual march

The Wilmington Minutemen will be marching off to Concord at 2 a.m. Monday to meet the British at Miriam's Corner, although this year there will be no Redcoats waiting. Each year since the middle sixties the Minutemen have re-enacted the road to battle that the original Minutemen took on April 19, 1775.

Last year was in conjunction with an event called Battle Road, put on by the Mass.

Council of Minutemen. Miriam's Corner was on of the battles re-enacted. The current issue of the Yankee Magazine has a feature on that event and several Wilmington Minutemen can be seen standing to face the "mightiest army in the world."

Among the locals in the Yankee photo are Frank Curley and Mal Malenchini. The "dead body" on the ground is Bill MacKinnon.

Cancer screening at Regional Health Center

Because of its commitment to early cancer detection and community service, the Regional Health Center in Wilmington is planning three cancer screening programs this spring, all free to the public.

The first will be a breast cancer screening for women, to be held on Tuesday, April 19 from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. and will include a film and discussion on self breast exam. The screenings will be conducted by the gynecology staff.

On Saturday, April 30, an oral cancer screening will be held in conjunction with "Health Works '83" health fair from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. This health fair will include several screenings including blood pressure, height, weight, anemia, vision, glaucoma, podiatry and an optional blood chemistry which checks liver and kidney functions, gout cholesterol, blood sugar level and many other functions. This optional test will cost $8.00 for more than $100 of blood work and requires an eight-hour fast. (No registration is necessary to attend Health Works.)

Health Works is part of a network of more than 100 health fairs throughout the state, sponsored by WHDH Radio 85, Shawmut Banks and WCVB Channel 5. Educational exhibits and displays will also be a part of Health Works located at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Colorectal cancer detection kits will be available on Thursday, May 19 at a program on "Preventing Colorectal Cancer," featuring Frederick L. Makrauer, M.D. gastroenterologist. This program is being held in recognition of the American Cancer Society's Bowl Cancer Day which will be held in early May throughout the country.

Congressman Markey to hold open forums

Congressman Ed Markey will hold special open forums in Wilmington, Tewksbury and Billerica, allowing area residents an opportunity to meet with Markey and his staff to ask questions, voice their opinions and discuss problems involving the federal government.

The Congressman will hold these special meetings in: Tewksbury at Tewksbury Town Hall, Sunday, May 1 from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Billerica at Billerica Town Hall, Saturday, May 14 from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

Wilmington at Wilmington Memorial Library, Saturday, May 14 from 12:30 to 2 p.m.

The Wilmington, Billerica and Tewksbury meetings are the first in a series of open forum programs planned by Markey.

The open forum - town meeting program will include no formal speeches, but will instead encourage an open discussion of both national and local issues, as well as personal meetings between the Congressman's staff and any constituents with individual problems.

Markey said he felt it was important that he hold the first of the open forum meetings in the communities new to the 7th District. Billerica, Tewksbury and Wilmington, along with the town of Lexington, were added to the 7th Congressional District at the beginning of this year as a result of the redrawing of the state's district boundaries.

"Over the past year and a half, I've met a great many citizens from Billerica, Lexington, Tewksbury and Wilmington through my frequent visits to each community," Markey said. The forum programs are especially important, for they afford me an excellent opportunity to let the new 7th District residents know that my staff and I are here to answer their questions and to help them with their problems.

"These special open forums bring me a much better understanding of the concerns and the needs of the people I represent. My mobile congressional office, my district office staff and my many community service programs have helped me keep in touch with my constituents," Markey said.

"These open forums are another step in that direction, and I hope that anyone who has the time will take advantage of this opportunity to meet with me. I'm looking forward to it."

These are some of my concerns:

Preparing our children by increased emphasis on math and science, to compete in our increasingly complex, technical world;

Continuing to emphasize written and spoken English, as well as reading, and, in so doing, seek to improve S.A.T. and basic skills test scores;

Seeking to develop a responsible, long-range plan for use of special buildings, thereby avoid unnecessary "school switching";

Encouraging, through a positive approach and high expectations, all interested students to seek education beyond high school;

Meeting the needs, both physical and educational, of students with special needs, as mandated by Chapter 766;

Providing safe, healthy environments including, buildings, buses and playgrounds for our children.

Views On Dental Health

By RANDALL SMITH, D.D.S.

85 Wilmington Road,

Burlington, Phone: 272-0540.

THE MYTH ABOUT LIFETIME DENTURES

If you've heard someone remark, after getting full dentures, that now he has teeth that will last a lifetime, don't be taken in by this myth. It's a fact that all dentures tend to settle into the mouth tissues after a period of years. This is a very slow process, and many people may not be aware of it until they take a closer look at their appearance when they look into a mirror.

As your dentures settle into your gums, the mouth tissues tend to flatten. The same kind of thing happens to sofa cushions after several years of use. When dentures settle, however, the distance from the tip of the nose to the point of the chin becomes shorter. This can give a person's face a worn appearance. The mouth may look caved in or there may be excessive wrinkles in the lips, cheeks, and chin, adding unsightly years to appearance.

Most dentists recommend that you have your dentures checked periodically for fit and efficiency. This is especially important if you want to protect your personal appearance as well as your dental well being.

Boy Scouts granted variance for carnival

Lawrence Flaherty, Scoutmaster of Troop 58, Boy Scouts, was granted a special permit Tuesday evening by the Wilmington Board of Appeals. Mr. Flaherty wants to operate a carnival on grounds of St. Dorothy's Church for the purpose of funding his Boy Scout Troop. It is, for Mr. Flaherty, an annual event.

Permission was granted. The troop is all ready for a carnival with the carnival properties already on the property.

Things were not as easy for Harold Allen Sr. of Lexington, owner of the former Charles Blaisdell property at 1 Lowell St. The Blaisdell property has sold kerosene and other fuels for about 30 years, prior to the purchase of the property by Mr. Allen, who owns a company named Rainbow Fuels.

Mr. Allen was appealing the decision of the building inspector, who had denied the right to store and sell propane gas from the property, as a permitted use. There was considerable opposition. He was denied a special permit.

Thomas Duggan of Hillcrest Street had no problems in his appeal. Mr. Duggan wanted to add 25 feet to his home which is already non-conforming according to the zoning bylaw. He sought to erect the addition in the front and side yard, in an SRA zone. The sites he had chosen had the space needed, and the board of appeals voted in favor.

Kwon Yin Tam had difficulties. Mr. Kwon operates the New Canton Restaurant on Lowell Street. It is a non-conforming structure, meaning that when it was constructed a special permit had to be granted for a variance from the zoning bylaw.

The building inspector had refused a permit to add to the building. Mr. Kwon appealed. Unfortunately he had not discussed his case with any builder or architect.

Without a comprehensive idea of what Mr. Kwon was seeking the board of appeals was unable to make a decision. Mr. Kwon was given a two week period in which to get advice before he again has to appear before the board of appeals. Member Carol Robbins volunteered to go down and look over the place, possibly with the idea of helping Mr. Kwon know what he wants to know.

Anthony Trimarchi of Wisser Street appeared before the board. He wants a variance, so he can erect an addition to his home, within the required reserve side yard.

Trimarchi explained that an uncle was coming down from New Hampshire to live with the family and more room is needed. The appeal board gave no immediate decision.

Alan and Julia Sargent of Shady Lane Drive had no problems with the board of appeals. They seek to add to their home. Technically what they were seeking was to enlarge an already non-conforming use, for a home.

It turned out that the couple seek to add a half dormer to their home. The addition would go straight up, and nothing would be added to the sides of the building. The appeal was granted.

Robert and Cynthia McLaughlin of Oak Street had the same kind of problem. The lot they own is only 38 feet wide and any enlargement of the home seems to spell trouble in that case.

But they did not seek to enlarge their home. They sought to "go straight up," and the board of appeals voted in favor.

But, in view of the size of the lot, the planning board member who was present suggested to the couple that they may want to talk over any problems with the board of health before they proceed.

Ernest Burns has a problem.

He owns a lot of land on Marion Street Extension. It is almost on Chestnut Street - indeed that street is only about a quarter of a mile away.

The problem is that Marion Street Extension is in Wilmington, a "paper" street. Permits to build on "paper" streets will not be granted until the street is paved or bonded for pavement, etc. etc. That's the law in Wilmington. It is a part of the "official map" law.

Mr. Burns was granted the right to erect a home. But, first he has to pave Marion Street Extension all the way to Chestnut Street. That can prove to be expensive.

Manifestly he was unhappy about the decision.

Talented IGE students perform during show

The stars were shining brightly on the Tewksbury Junior High School stage on Thursday, March 31, when the Center School's IGE (individually guided education) students and faculty presented a talent show.

There was nearly a standing room only audience to witness the wide variety of dances, musical interludes and brief skits.

A surprise song and dance, performed by the Center School faculty, capped off the nearly hour and a half long show.

Performing in individual acts (under the direction of Kris Hassan and Ray Loosen) were: Angela Busa, Lisa O'Neill, Alaina Smith, Dawn Corson, Paula Price, Erin Campbell, Maryellen Brooks, Karen Stefany, Joanne Giasullo, Tina Guttadauro, Tim Cabral, Peggy Ricardo, Julie Boucher, Kris Earle, Eileen Kim, Debbie Kim, Kim Mullin, Darlene Bourque, Laurie Horton, Carolyn Walsh, Kathy Mills, Michelle Boutwell and Joanne Giasullo.

The Center School Band (under the direction of Joseph Buckley) played three selections: "In Old Vienna," "Glowworm," and "Rock Explosion." Band members performing were Jeff Landry, Eileen Kim, Deborah Kim, Julie Boucher, Margaret Ricardo, Coreen Floyd, Nicole Rheault and Lisa O'Neill.

The full Center School chorus (under direction of Roger Whittlesey) also performed a few selections.

The members of the Center School Parents Advisory Council provided refreshments after the show and had assisted the school throughout the whole project.

Music Director Roger Whittlesey offers applause from back stage as Angela Busa finishes her dance routine with striking pose.

The Senior Citizens Speak

In some ways Wilmington has had a nasty campaign. Many untruthful statements have been made. None of those came from George W. Hooper.

Between now and election day it is entirely possible that more untruthful statements will be made. None will come from George W. Hooper.

We are the real concerned citizens of Wilmington. We are the senior citizens of the town who know George W. Hooper as an honest and respectable person. For 10 years he has worked for the senior citizens of Wilmington, quietly and with no name calling.

He has worked for affordable housing, for senior citizens. He has improved the senior housing being provided at Deming Way. Much that was shabby and of poor construction has been replaced, thanks to the efforts of George W. Hooper.

Mr. Hooper is the person who is now pointing the way toward more housing for Wilmington seniors. It was he who proposed changes in the sewerage program for Deming Way; changes which, in a year or two may have more homes for us, the senior citizens of Wilmington.

One hundred thousand dollars has now been promised from the Executive Office of Community Affairs, and an expected $110,000 can be obtained through the Small City Block Program of Massachusetts. This will construct the new sewer from Deming Way. It may take a few months, it may take several years, but the way now seems open for more senior housing in Wilmington.

George W. Hooper proposed this program. Others have helped. The Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners, the Wilmington Selectmen, Rep. Jim Miceli and Jay Donovan have all made valuable contributions.

We believe the program will be carried through to completion. It may take a couple of years, but it will be achieved.

State Softball comes Wilmington's way

One of this summer's sporting highlights is headed for Wilmington, as the Wilmington Softball League and the Lowell based Tighe Club softball team will co-host the State Modified Tournament at the Town Park July 28 through 31.

Wilmington Softball League Director Jack Cushing and Tighe Club manager Jay Tighe are planning to honor the founder of Wilmington softball, former Wilmington High School Athletic Director Larry Cushing. Tighe has said that he wants very much to handle the upcoming summer of quality softball in Wilmington as a tribute to Larry.

Wilmington's Town Park will host several State Modified Tourney games that weekend, with Lowell and Tewksbury slated as the other tentative sites.

The Town Park will also be the site of the Qualifying Tourney the Fourth of July weekend, when 20 teams will battle for three State Tourney berths.

The host Tighe Club, one of the top teams in the tough Lowell League, features several talented area players that include Wilmington's Art Bibeau (catcher), George Butters (outfield) and Jim Busby (outfield) along with Tewksbury veterans Jack Foster (pitcher), Scott Braxten (firstbase) and Tim Walsh.

The team also features slugging firstbaseman Wilba Simmons and the doubleplay combination of former U Lowell star Bill Riley at shortstop and Dave Camacho at secondbase. The duo turned over 70 doubleplays last summer.

Esposito named Billerica coach

Former Wilmington High School, Boston College and Atlanta Falcon standout running back Mike Esposito has a new position: head coach of the struggling Billerica High School football varsity, replacing Clyde Meyerhoffer, who resigned after another disappointing season a year ago.

Esposito, who owns the Esposito Nautilus Center in Billerica, was named to the position by the Billerica School Committee Monday night. He was chosen over several candidates that included longtime Billerica politician and youth coach George Gracie, Lowell High assistant Paul Lynch and Gary Nihan, a WHS assistant football coach last season.

For the past two seasons Esposito has served as co-head coach at Chelmsford, where he coordinated the offense to a combined 14-5-1 slate. Jack Fletcher was the defensive coordinator in that unique situation.

While running for Wilmington High School, Esposito set a number of schoolboy rushing and scoring records that have since been broken by former Greater-Lowell running back Joe Fuller.

After his graduation from WHS, Mike went on to enjoy a fine career at Boston College despite numerous nagging injuries.

An all-too-brief stint in pro football followed, with Esposito seeing duty on the Atlanta Falcons' special teams while occasionally cracking the Falcons' backfield.

Mike went on to coach semipro football, assisted WHS football for a short period, then was named to the Chelmsford co-coaching job upon the resignation of the popular Tom Caito two years ago.

Esposito takes over a program that has never lived up to expectations in the rugged Merrimack Valley Conference. Over the past several seasons the Indians have been noted for untimely fundamental football gaffs. Perhaps one of the greatest high school players to come out of this area can bring about a change in the Billerica football attitude.

In another interesting conference coaching change, Caito is back at the Chelmsford helm after stints in Cocoa, Florida and Scotch Plains High School in New Jersey.

Caito coached the Lions to the EMass Division II Super Bowl in 1978 before leaving in 1981 in the wake of Proposition 2½ when the Chelmsford School Department could not guarantee him a teaching job.

The popular Caito, who was unanimously approved by the Chelmsford School Committee last week, still has no guarantee of a teaching position, but he will be back to head another very talented team.

And in Haverhill, the search goes on for a replacement for veteran football coach and athletic director Joe Carven, who was unceremoniously dumped out of both jobs several months ago.

Tewksbury will be tough

Tewksbury High School could have its best softball team in years this spring with the return of several outstanding players from last year's tourney club.

Included in that top notch group are catcher Missy Riddle, pitchers Robin Riddle and Leann Stewart, and junior slugger Laura Briggs. Coach Donna Tanner also reportedly boasts an outstanding bench this season.

MVC girls' track

Rowe paces Wildcats in second setback

by Rick Cooke
Sports Editor

Wilmington High School senior Karen Rowe turned in her second straight outstanding effort of the spring, but it wasn't quite enough to overcome the loss of senior miler Mary McNaughton (sidelined by illness), as the Haverhill girls came back to catch the Cats, 66-51 in rain soaked MVC dual meet action at the WHS track Monday afternoon.

The loss dropped coach Frank Kelley's girls to 0-2-0 on the young season with an earlier setback to Billerica. The victory improved Haverhill's slate to 2-0-0.

Rowe has recorded four firsts in the opening two meets, including her tying of the school record with a superb 11.6 effort in the 100 yard dash against Billerica.

Monday Karen attempted to offset the loss of McNaughton with victories in both the high jump (4'6") and the 100 yard dash (12.0). She also anchored the winning 440 relay crew of Nancy Jones, Stephanie Briggs and Ann Ryan. That unit finished in 54.7.

Senior Cheryl Branscombe also came up with a sparkling effort for the locals, breaking her own school mark in the discus with a mighty 114'6" heave. This effort shattered her previous WHS mark by more than six feet.

Other Wilmington winners included Briggs in the hurdles (17.2) and Pam Davis in the javelin (76'11").

Taking home second places for the Wildcats were Ryan in the javelin, sophomore Debbie Errico in the long jump and the mile, Lisa Desjorge (880) and Jones (220).

Third spots went to Branscombe (shot put), Davis (hurdles), Jones (long jump), Ryan (220), Andrea Hayden (two mile) and Nancy Newark (440).

Coach Kelley was pleased with the overall effort of his girls, who led through the first 10 events before slipping after building an eight point bulge through the 440 yard relay. Haverhill took the lead to stay when Kersten Anderson won the 880 run.

The Wilmington girls now gear up for their first-ever Invitational Meet at the WHS track this Saturday morning (April 16) starting at 9:30. Eighteen teams, including Tewksbury High School, will be competing at Wilmington Saturday.

Director says thanks

Girls Basketball Director Roberta Whelton would like to thank the following people for filling in for her during her recent illness. Lynn Anzivino for the many hours of scoring and coordination of the Senior League. Rita Sullivan for the many hours of scheduling referees for the Junior and Senior Leagues, and Dottie Byrne for coordinating the efforts of the Junior League.

A big thanks also to all the volunteer coaches and referees who made it possible for the league to expand, as the league jumped from 105 to 210 girls this season. To the Tewksbury Recreation Department for its continued support of girls' sports. For the long hours of fundraising, a big thanks to Bill and Sandy Zotto and Bob and Jackie Rhodes. Without those efforts there would be no banquet or awards. To Mickey Sullivan, Tewksbury Athletic Director, thanks for helping out with gym time for games and practice sessions.

The second annual Invitational Tournament was another success due to the efforts of a great many people - in particular the School Department: John Wynn and William DiGregorio and M. Sullivan, who allowed the use of the new high school gym. It was a thrill for the girls to play in this beautiful facility. To Selectman Bill Hallissey and Clerk of the Works Callahan and his crew for coming through in that crucial last week of construction.

Thank you also to Mary Hallissey and Converse Rubber for donating the great NBA wall posters to all the girls in the tournament. They were a great addition to a successful event. Finally, a big thanks to all the parents of the girls in Tewksbury Basketball who donated marathon hours at the gym at the concession stand, ticket table and as corridor monitors to help insure the security of the school. Their cooperation was the reason for the tournament's success.

Wilmington boys hang tough

Wilmington was well represented this past weekend in the Somerville Boys' Club

Annual Basketball Tournament. Two teams of boys representing the regular Youth Basketball traveling teams of seventh and eighth graders were joined by a new team of ninth graders for the tournament. Forty-five teams from the greater Boston area entered the tourney.

Saturday's action saw the Wilmington eighth graders defeat Braintree, 58-39. The Wilmington scoring was led by Robby DeSantis and John Harding with 12 points apiece. Jim Clancy followed with nine points. George Fuller and Sean Hayward had seven each, Eric Braciska five, Jim Pelletier three and Bob Boudreau one. Strong work on the boards was turned in by DeSantis, Clancy, Boudreau and Fuller. Leading the defense were Jeff LaBossierie and Scott Ferrari.

Sunday morning action saw the Wilmington seventh graders losing to a tough North Andover team, 53-33. Wilmington suffered the effects of a letdown after winning the Gardner Invitational Tournament two weeks ago. Mike Lombard led the scoring with 11 points while grabbing seven rebounds. Eric Pentinen hit for seven points. Kevin Ouellette had six, Paul Maiella four, Tony DeSantis, three and Pat Nally, two. Helping Lombard under the boards were Pentinen and Nally with five rebounds each and Chris D'Antonio with one. Jonathan Oliver and Vinnie Zarella, along with Tim and Tom Moran sparked a fine defensive effort in a losing cause.

The following Sunday game pitted the newly formed Wilmington ninth graders, coached by Joe Maiella, against a well-drilled South Boston team. After a fine effort Wilmington went down to a 66-40 defeat. Leading Wilmington was Mike Ferrari with 10 points and Dave Hamilton with eight. The balance of the scoring was split up by the rest of the team in a fine team effort, including Dave Curran, Mike Stuart, Joe Maiella, Chris Parr, Eric Terrell, Fred Ryan, John McLaughlin and Russell Leyden. The boys gave a good account of themselves in their first tournament effort.

Monday night the eighth graders held their own with an experienced Somerville team through the first half, only to bow, 72-39. Leading the team with a fine effort was Robby DeSantis, who hit for 17 points and hauled in 18 rebounds. Jim Clancy tossed in 10 points, Jim Pelletier had four, George Fuller three, Eric Braciska three and Scott Ferrari two. John Harding grabbed two rebounds, Sean Hayward three and Jeff LaBossierie picked of two boards. Bobby Boudreau and Dave Schmitt anchored the Wilmington defense.

This was the final weekend of action for the Wilmington Youth Basketball Association traveling teams. In their first year of playing in the North Shore Basketball League, both the seventh and eighth grade teams, coached by Bob Butler and Ray Ventura, showed great improvement over the course of the year. The season was highlighted by the seventh grade team winning the Gardner Invitational and taking second place in the Tewksbury Tournament.

access across the front. The only access permitted would be by means of West Street.

"You people have deceived me all the way down the line," Forrest said. "You have lied to me."

"I'm not putting the Commonwealth of Massachusetts out of business," he said. "Don't put me out of business!"

Forrest said that he would sue.

The hearing was also the first time that state officials publicly said which buildings would be taken by the project. Two houses, the Ryan home on West Street and the Thomas house on Lowell Street would go, as would two commercial buildings. One is a small engineering office on West Street, owned by Ken Miller, the other a larger commercial building at 122 West St., owned by Al Fiorenza. If the north part of West Street were to be built, two houses would be taken on West Street between Westdale Avenue and Nickerson Avenue, White's and Foye's.

Mitchell gave a description of the project. The intersection of Woburn and Lowell Streets will be relocated toward Aveo, an don the south side of Lowell Street, Woburn Street will be widened to three lanes for approximately 200 feet. Lowell Street (Route 129) will be widened to four lanes from Woburn Street east.

West Street on the south side of Route 129 will be relocated in an "s-curve" intersecting Lowell Street near the present Thomas residence. This new intersection will be signaled to allow traffic to turn left from Route 129 eastbound to west West Street southbound. East of the new intersection, a median strip will be constructed in the middle of Route 129, to the Rading town line.

The Route 129 interchange with Route 93 will be converted from a two ramp interchange to a four-ramp cloverleaf. The bridge will be replaced, with the new structure being a double span. A new bridge will be built to the south of the existing bridge, and then, once it is completed, the existing bridge will be replaced with a new one, to carry the westbound traffic.

Mr. DeAngelo of the Mass. Dept. of Public Works said that another year and a half of engineering work remained. He estimated that construction would begin in about two years.

(SEAL) Case No. 110624

This housewife decided to become a dentist

By Judith T. Myers

In 1965, when Elaine Hatch was graduated from Boston's Forsyth School for Dental Hygienists, she had no inkling that 16 years later she would be working in her own office in Burlington as Elaine Hatch, Doctor of Dental Medicine.

In fact, in the first years out of college, Elaine followed a fairly typical path. She worked as a dental hygienist for a male dentist in Boston, she married, she had two children, and she continued working part-time in the office of a male dentist in Peabody. But every so often her husband, George, would badger, "Why don't you go to dental school?" or just simply, "Are you ready yet?"

In 1973 she was ready. Her children then three and five, she completed the few science courses she was lacking from her undergraduate education, took the dental school admission test, and filed her application to the Tufts University School of Dental Medicine. In July of that year she was offered admission, in August she began classes, and from that point on anything typical about the path of Elaine's life was over.

Crazy to enjoy dental school

To meet Dr. Hatch during her lunch hour requires a confirming nod of the head from her office manager that she is, in fact, the dentist. Her pale pink blouse-gray wrap-around skirt, and sling-back shoes give no hint of her profession. Fortunately, tossed over the back of her chair is a telltale accoutrement: a white lab coat. Forty-two years old, tall with short brown hair, her demeanor is quiet and assured.

Asked what she liked most about dental school, Elaine (as she prefers being called) throws up her hands in mock dismay. "Nothing! Anyone who enjoys dental school is crazy," she laughs. Dental school of course is never a casual undertaking; for a wife and a mother of small children, the pace and the demands are rigorous.

At the time Elaine attended, Tufts dental students went to school year 'round for three years (now they go for four academic years). She would arise at about 5:30 a.m., get her kids to the day care center before 7, and head into Boston for a day of classes, labs, and clinics. Dental students are required to do all their own lab work, and most of the resident students tackle this at night, working in the labs 'til 10:30 or so. Elaine felt she owed her family some time each day, so she would squeeze her lab work in during the day. She would finally hit the books at home about 8:30, study 'til 12:30 or 1:00, then grab a few short hours of sleep. She continued working as a dental hygienist on Saturdays. On Sundays the whole family "crashed."

Reflecting for a moment, Elaine comments, "I really envy dental students who continue their schooling right after college, before assuming other responsibilities. I think it could have been a little more enjoyable that way."

At one point during her training, Elaine had to cope with her daughter's open heart surgery. She credits her husband with helping her through the periods of discouragement and for assuming a lot of the house- and child-care duties. "One of the strong incentives I had not to give up," she adds, "was the fact that we borrowed so much money to put me through dental school. I would think of all that borrowed money and say, 'I can't possibly quit'."

A family practice

Dental school finally completed in 1976, Elaine affiliated in a general practice with the Peabody dentist for whom she had worked as a hygienist. Then, in October, 1981, she opened up her own general practice in Burlington — for the challenge and the independence.

It's a glistening office where she practices, decorated in geometric-patterned wallpaper of blues, grays, and metallic silver that glints in the afternoon sun that pours in. A large waiting room features gray carpet and chrome-and-gray tweed chairs facing a long gray formica receptionist's counter. The actual treatment area is small: one modest examination room. Elaine's office and lab comprise the rest of the work area. Two as yet unfinished rooms could become additional treatment rooms.

Several announcements in local papers drew a trickle of patients to get her started. Elaine also credits her attractive wooden sign outside the office, on which her name and specialty are spelled out in bold, brown letters, for bringing her exposure. Just a few years ago such an attention-getting sign would have been considered inappropriate by the American Dental Association — as would any advertising.

Her clientele built steadily from people spying that sign and then from word of mouth until Elaine now has what she calls "a family practice" of many patients. She also doesn't rule out the novelty factor of a woman dentist for bringing her some customers. And she chuckles at the ironic way in which she has gotten a few more patients: There is a small grocery store right next to her office that is a favorite after-school hang-out for teenagers. "They will sit on my steps drinking their sodas and eating their candy" — here she winces — "and we got to be friends. Later, in need of a dentist, they have called me."

Elaine says her practice has a fairly even mix of men, women, and children. "Women may have the impression that a woman dentist will be gentler," she observes, "though it's not necessarily true." On the other hand, one woman patient of hers declined to have Elaine put on a cap for her, fearing Elaine "too delicate" for the work. She also senses female patients feel more comfortable seeking her out for cosmetic dental work that the patients fear a male dentist would consider mere vanity. However, just to avoid any surprises, Elaine has her office manager make it a point in phone conversations with people to stress that the doctor is a "she."

Patients' priorities

Elaine's operating philosophy is this: "When that patient is in the chair, I want him or her to feel like No. 1 with me." She and her patients are on a mutual first-name basis. Elaine recognizes that her patients' priorities may differ from hers. "I may feel a patient needs a new inlay. The patient may prefer to put that money toward a dishwasher," she says.

Teenagers visiting her — or anyone else so inclined — may withdraw into the natural "audio anesthetic" of a Sony tapeplayer with earphones while being treated. All patient care is administered by Elaine, from

Jon Asgeirsson conducts

"Hits of the 1940's"

WOBURN Following up on the fantastic "Irish Night" at the Kennedy Junior High School, the Woburn Recreation Commission is planning another extravaganza - The Big Band Sounds to the "Hits of the 40's" featuring the Woburn City Band's "Big Band" under the direction of Jon A. Asgeirsson on May 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Kennedy Junior High School on Middle Street.

The Woburn Recreation Commission will present this fine show and thanks the Woburn National Bank for sponsoring the program. Admission will be by ticket only. Tickets will be available shortly at the Recreation Commission office in City Hall or at the main office of the Woburn National Bank.

Woburn City Band "Big Band" last presented this type of program two years ago featuring the saxes, trombones, trumpets and rhythm of the Woburn City Band personnel. Reminisce with them as they play the great hits of that period.

It all began with Benny Goodman. His was the band that sparked the whole big band scene. He was the first truly important musician to bridge the gap between the leaders and their bands and the general public.

Benny and his clarinet became a symbol, a direct line of emotional and musical communication between those on the stand and those who gathered around to watch, to dance and to listen - in person, on records and over the radio. The kind of excitement he created through his personality and his superb musicianship set the pace for all who followed. There was room near the top for all kinds of bands including Guy Lombardo. Kay

Kaiser and Sammy Kaye and the swing bands such as Artie Shaw, the Dorseys, Count Basie, Hal McIntyre, Harry James and Glen Miller.

When the country started latching on to the big band sounds in the mid 30's, it was merely discovering the music that Duke Ellington and his band had already been playing for close to ten years. Ellington has often credited his side men with the success of his band. But those who knew Duke and his music best will invariably tell you that what has set the Ellington band apart from other bands is just one thing - the brilliant conductor - composer - arranger, pianist and leader of men, Duke Ellington himself. A wonderfully warm and witty gentleman, Duke Ellington's fertile mind created some of the finest songs of the period, including "Don't Get Around Much Anymore."

One of Harry James' greatest hits was "You Made Me Love You." He recorded that tune for a very simple reason: he loved the way Judy Garland sang the song. He was not the only one who loved her distinctive delivery.

In 1939 there was a production movie which was to make Judy Garland one of the biggest names in show business. Today we see it yearly on the T.V. That show was the "Wizard of Oz." To help recreate that wonderful nostalgia of never-never land, Patty Tauro will sing "Over the Rainbow."

Come hear tunes including "On the Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe," "Stardust," and everyone's all-time favorite, Glen Miller's "In the Mood." Director Jon Asgeirsson of Reading notes: "The tunes of the Big Band era are still with us. They never went away. It was a time when everyone was singing and whistling the melodies and musicians had to know how to read notes. On May 10 you will relive your favorite songs."

Submit bill if you want to get paid by Medicare

Many people must wait longer than necessary to receive payment from their Medicare medical insurance because they failed to submit itemized bills with their request for payment form, Dover C. Crawford, Social Security district manager in Malden said recently.

Medical insurance is the part of Medicare that helps pay for doctor bills, outpatient hospital bills, and other items and services not covered by hospital insurance.

To receive payment under medical insurance, if a doctor or supplier does not send in the claim, a person normally submits a form requesting payment, and the doctor or supplier provides an itemized bill to be sent in with the form. If the bill does not contain a detailed description of the services provided, a decision cannot be made as to whether the services are covered. As a result, the patient or doctor must be contacted for more information, and payment is delayed.

To prevent this delay, people should be sure that each bill shows a description of each service provided, the date and place of the service, the charge, a leaflet, Payment for each service, and Under Medicare the name of the doctor, Medical Insurance or supplier. Also, the which is available free person's name and of charge at any Social health insurance claim Security office. The number should appear on each bill. Further information located at 200 Pleasant Street. The telephone can be found in the number is 227-2400.

Child care requires a license

Are you caring for children other than your own in your home? You may be one of the growing number of family day care providers who are filling a very important need for child care in Massachusetts. State law (Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 28A) requires any person who cares for one to six children in her home during all or part of the day to register with the Office for Children. This law requires you to meet the state's minimum requirements for operating a family day care home. Registration information and applications are available free of charge.

The Eastern Middlesex Office for Children publishes lists of registered family day care providers in Melrose, Wakefield, Stoneham, Reading, and North Reading; town lists are made available to parents and agencies seeking day care services in the five towns.

Area Registration Coordinator, Eastern Middlesex Office for Children, Seven Lincoln Street, Wakefield, Ma. 01880, telephone 245-7430.

This housewife decided to become a dentist

routine cleanings to surgery.

It's the kind of practice where a patient will drop in just to say hello or to extend wishes for the holidays. Elaine feels her patients have a better experience because of the friendly, relaxed atmosphere. "I have a lovely nitrous oxide kit," she remarks, "that I've been able to use about half a dozen times. Nobody asks for it!" Of course, things don't always run serenely. One 12-year-old boy got all settled in the chair for a filling only to sit bolt upright, say, "I don't think I want to be here!", and run out the door. (He eventually came back and is now one of those who stops by to say hello.)

The doctor opens her office one day each week at 7:00 a.m. and remains open one night each week 'til 9:00. She also makes it a point always to return phone calls the same day they are received. Chances are good that a patient calling during the lunch hour will reach Elaine directly. Unless she's away from town, Elaine is available for any emergency calls or visits, but she says about once a month is as often as such a situation will arise.

Hard Work

What traits does a woman need to be a good dentist? Elaine leans back and lists reflectively: "Determination. Drive. Energy. Compassion. Patience. A personality that meshes well with others." She points out that dentistry is hard work, both physically and mentally. "Not only are you physically working for most of the day," she says, "all your powers of concentration must be directed at that patient you're working on. You just cannot think about anything else or allow yourself to be distracted by anything."

Would Elaine Hatch recommend the dental profession to other women? Without hesitation she says stoutly, "Absolutely." Then she continues: "All my reactions to my career move are positive. I only wish I'd done it earlier. I'm more my own person now. I have fun at what I do, and my children and husband are proud of me and pleased with what I do."

The number of women dentists in the country today still is small, though that number is steadily increasing. According to the American Dental Association's most recent statistics (1979), 1,934 women are dentists as compared to 115,289 men. Women thus represent a little less than two percent of the profession.

By the way of comparison, women physicians total 52,509 — this according to the American Medical Association's most recent (1980) tabulations. With 356,271 men physicians, women comprise about 13 percent of that profession.

Dr. Helmi Fogels, Associate Professor and Assistant Dean of Special Projects at Tufts's School of Dental Medicine (and one of a mere handful of women dentists who are deans at dental schools), supplies the historical perspective on women in dentistry (the year and percentage of women dentists in the U.S.): 1910 — 3.1 percent; 1920 — 3.2 percent; 1930 — 1.8 percent; 1940 — 1.5 percent; 1950 — 2.7 percent; 1960 — 2.1 percent; 1970 — 3.4 percent. (This information was obtained by the then Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in 1976 for a study of women in the health professions.)

Dr. Fogels attributes the higher percentage of women dentists in certain decades (1910, 1920, 1950) to influxes of immigrants, especially after the first and second World Wars. Women dentists, she says, have always been more prevalent in foreign countries than in the U.S. and a young woman had role models to follow in the form of perhaps her mother, an aunt, or another female relative.

In the more affluent American of the '50s and early '60s, it became the trend for women to stay at home. The number of women dentists declined. With the women's movement that began in the early '70s, the percentage once again rose, though currently in the early '80s it is lower than it was then. But with women dental students currently comprising about 20 percent of all American dental school enrollments, Dr. Fogels expects the percentage to rise again, substantially, and to remain high.

Dr. Fogels admits she is at a loss to explain precisely why women have not entered dentistry in the U.S. with the same force with which they have entered other professions. Dr. Elaine Hatch comments that perhaps women have the mistaken notion that great strength is needed in a dentist or that they connect the profession with the manual tinkering often said to be an innate male talent. Adds Dr. Anthi Tsamtsouris, Associate Professor of Oral Pediatrics at Tufts and District Chairperson of the Massachusetts Chapter of the National Association of Women

Dentists, "Ten years ago women might have had problems in being accepted in the profession, but not now."

Both Dr. Fogels and Dr. Tsamtsouris note that it wasn't until the Class of '76 (Elaine Hatch's class) that Tufts noted any marked increase in its women dental students. Until that time, says Dr. Tsamtsouris, who has taught at Tufts since the early '70s, she would encounter only one or two women in her classes and often they were from foreign countries. In the Class of '76, however, there were 20 women out of 145 students.

Today, according to the admission office at Tufts, about 20 percent of its applicants to the dental school are women, as has been the case for the past five or so years. In 1982, 33 of the 160 graduating dentists at Tufts were female.

As for women dental school faculty, at Tufts there are seven on the fulltime faculty of 36. Four of the women are tenured (as compared with 21 men).

Clearly, the matter of why more women have not gone into dentistry is baffling. But consider these figures (year and percentage of women in graduating dental classes): 1978 — 10.6 percent; 1979 — 11.7 percent; 1980 — 13.3 percent; 1981 — 14.5 percent; 1982 — 15.3 percent.

As Dr. Fogels puts it, "The word has spread that dentistry is a fine profession for women. We are now seeing substantial numbers of native-trained, native-motivated women graduating from American dental schools."

TAX SAVINGS

Q. If I decide to open an IRA, when do I make my contribution?

A. You may make it as early as the first day of the calendar year. You may also wait until you are ready to file your tax return, which means that you can make an IRA contribution for 1982 tax purposes, as late as April 15th of 1983.

Q. If I already have an IRA, can I open another one?

A. Yes. However, if you maintain multiple IRAs, your annual contribution to all plans must not exceed $2,000 or $2,250 for a spousal IRA account. Every IRA can be transferred once a year. At the IRA, managed by Advest, Inc., one of the largest regional investment firms in the U.S., you simply fill out a Transfer Request form and return it to them along with the company's application form. In these cases, the firm does not charge a set-up fee as it does for a brand-new plan.

Gasoline prices lower but....

Gasoline in the state is 9 cents to 12 cents per gallon cheaper than it was last December, according to a spot check of stations conducted by AAA Massachusetts.

The AAA survey reported these average per gallon prices in Massachusetts: regular leaded $1.102; unleaded $1.141; premium unleaded $1.258. These are lower than prices in the other New England states.

The 5 cents per gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax went into effect April 1, and a state gas tax increase of 1 cent or 2 cents a gallon may be levied at that time also.

Many of the first houses in the American colonies were built from bricks used as ballast in the holds of ships.

Training for a race

Here, from the experts, are some training tips you might follow:

- You should not enter a race unless you have run that distance regularly or have comfortably gone at least 2/3 to 3/4 of that distance in your training runs. Running a race requires both mental and physical conditioning. The tendency is to run faster and the mental pressure to push harder is greater. Finishing is more important than winning.
- Train with other runners so you have the feel of other runners around you. If possible, try to run over terrain surface and in weather conditions that are similar to those you will encounter in the race. Excessive cold, hot or humid weather should be avoided.
- Don't commit yourself to running in races too close together.

Teach children facts about food, nutrition

Among the most important facts of life for teenagers are those about food and nutrition. Food is what they eat; nutrients are the substances in food that are needed by rapidly growing bodies.

"Since most children begin choosing their own foods at an age when their bodies are growing very fast," says Roberta Henry, R.D., director of Nutrition Services at The Children's Hospital, Boston, "it is very important for them to know the facts about good nutrition. Teenagers should recognize the difference between food and nutrients, and understand that what fills the stomach doesn't necessarily feed the body."

A good diet for teenagers includes daily servings of foods from four basic groups: fruits and vegetables (four servings); grains and grain products (four servings); milk products (three servings); and beans, eggs, fish, meat, and nuts (two servings). Some foods within a group are better choices than others, since they provide more nutrients and less sugar, salt, fat, or processing. For example, although milk and ice cream are in the same group, ice cream provides fewer nutrients and has more sugar and fat than milk.

"At this age, teenagers have more frequent opportunities to eat away from their families. Even if breakfast is generally eaten at home, lunch may be packed or purchased at school or at a restaurant. Snacks are often purchased. Even dinners may be eaten with friends in pizza parlors or fast food restaurants.

Teenagers don't usually "relax over a meal the way adults do," she says. "Because they are always on the go, they are more likely to grab something quick and easy."

A balanced diet can be managed even by teenagers on the run. One way is for parents to make nutritious foods available at home for "grabbing." These include raw vegetable sticks, fresh fruit, cheese, yogurt, raisins, nuts, popcorn, whole grain bread, and peanut butter.

Fast food, according to Ms. Henry, is not necessarily synonymous with junk food, just as natural food is not always nutritious. "It is quite possible to eat nutritiously at a fast food restaurant," she says, "because many of them have salad bars. A hamburger, although high in fat, is also high in protein and carbohydrates. If supplemented with lettuce and tomato and a glass of milk, it makes a balanced meal. Many fast food restaurants have salad bars containing nutritious foods. Pizza can also be nutritious, particularly if it is topped with vegetables.

"Similarly," she says, "all natural foods are not necessarily nutritious. Granola bars, for example, are high in calories and low in nutrients."

"In evaluating their child's nutrition, parents should assess the entire day's food intake, not just a particular snack or meal," says Ms. Henry. Junk food may not be junk in the context of an entire day. Tacos, if eaten alone for lunch, are not very nutritious. But they might make a harmless addition to a good lunch."

Even more important than making sure their teenagers know the facts about nutrition, parents can set a good example. Children who have always been exposed to nutritious foods and healthy eating habits are not likely to change when they become teenagers.

Need help talking?

One out of every ten persons in Massachusetts suffers from a speech, language or hearing impairment, making communicative disorders the state's most prevalent handicap.

Senator Edward Kennedy is lending his public support to a campaign sponsored by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) to increase public awareness of communicative disorders and of the professional help available in Massachusetts.

"Most people with speech, language or hearing disorders can be helped," said Senator Kennedy, "if the problem is recognized and treated promptly."

According to ASHA, the 37,000-member non-profit society of speech-language pathologists and audiologists, many people with communicative disorders suffer needlessly because they don't know where to turn for help. Nationally, over $1.75 billion in earnings are lost each year due to communicative disorders.

Professional help is available. For information write Massachusetts Speech-Language-Hearing Association, 25 Elm Street, Braintree, Massachusetts 02184.

Movie Review

"Sophie's Choice" an artistic achievement

By DAN KENNEDY

Maybe movie critics should be ordered to never read the novel on which the movie they are reviewing is based. Because "Sophie's Choice" (rated R) has received a number of negative reviews of the "it's not as good as the book" school, and those reviews are patently unfair.

As one who has not read the book, I can unequivocally state that "Sophie's Choice" stands alone as one of the most outstanding examples of cinematic art of the year.

The trio of director-writer Alan J. Pakula, actress Meryl Streep and actor Kevin Kline have accomplished a stunning triumph: they have produced a deeply moving, unforgettable motion picture. Why should anyone care if it doesn't conform totally to William Styron's novel?

"Sophie's Choice" is set in a Brooklyn apartment house in 1947, where an aspiring young writer from the South, Stingo (played listlessly and ineptly by Peter MacNichol, the only poor performance in the film) meets a couple engaged in a torrid but troubled romance. Sophie (Streep), a Polish Catholic survivor of the Nazi death camps, and Nathan (Kline), a Jewish New Yorker who, despite a more placid background than Sophie's, is weaker and more unbalanced than her.

Stingo is the narrator of the film, and we see Sophie and Nathan's stories — and the horror of Sophie's Holocaust "choice" — unfold through his eyes.

Streep's performances in past movies have always been outstanding ("The Seduction of Joe Tynan," "The French Lieutenant's Woman," "Kramer vs. Kramer"), but none of her previous work could have prepared her for her devastating performance in "Sophie's Choice."

She is on camera for at least 80 percent of the movie, in settings ranging from a day at Coney Island to a day at Auschwitz, speaking three languages and speaking English with a letter-perfect Polish accent. Her emotional range is astonishing. It is difficult to conceive how she could ever turn in a performance to equal this one.

In addition, her quirky good looks work perfectly in "Sophie's Choice." Never has she appeared more beautiful.

Also turning in a fine performance is Kline. "Sophie's Choice" is his movie debut, but he'll undoubtedly be offered many more parts on the basis of his depiction of Nathan. Like Streep, he must demonstrate a wide range of emotion, but he is not on camera nearly as often, and the settings aren't as challenging.

Despite the fact that he holds down the narrator's role, MacNichol's Stingo isn't as important to the movie as one might think. As a result, MacNichol fortunately never becomes more than a slight irritation.

Pakula's sure hand is evident throughout, keeping the film moving along without being rushed and bringing out the best in everyone.

Because of the subject matter of "Sophie's Choice," it has been rated R. But everyone over the age of 12, accompanied by an adult, should see this movie. "Sophie's Choice" isn't "E.T." It tells an important story and demonstrates fully the inhumanity and cool but insane savagery of which we are all capable under the wrong circumstances.

Old Sturbridge Village resumes summer hours

Old Sturbridge Village resumed summer hours of operation on April 2, the living history center announced recently. The Village remains open 9 A.M. — 5 P.M. daily through October 29. The Village's Bake-House, which prepares and sells fresh-baked cookies daily, also opened April 2.

Old Sturbridge Village, the largest institution of its kind in the Northeast, recreates everyday life of a typical rural New England town some 150 years ago. More than 40 restored antique buildings that include houses, churches, mills, craft-shops and a fully operating historical farm occupy 200 acres of woods and meadows where people in authentic dress of the 1830s show more than 500,000 visitors each year the work, skills and community life of early New England housewives, farmers and country artisans.

The full cycle of early 19th-century farming is re-created, from spring plowing with teams of oxen, to harvesting in the fall. More than 15 traditional crafts are demonstrated daily. Throughout the year, historically dressed householders and artisans participate in more than 20 authentic re-creations of early 19th-century community events such as Militia Training Day and town meetings, and holiday celebrations for Washington's Birthday, July 4 and Thanksgiving Day. Calendars of special events, published quarterly, are available on request, free of charge.

The Village is located on Route 20 west in Sturbridge, Ma., at Exit 9 of the Massachusetts Turnpike and Exit 3 of Interstate 86. The Village is located 55 miles west of Boston, 40 miles northeast of Hartford, Ct., and a three-hour drive from New York City.

Food and refreshments are available at the Tavern on the Village Common. A cafeteria is open daily year round. Hearty New England fare is available in the Great Room Buffet on weekends May through June 10, and daily June 11 through October 29. Box lunches are available and snack bars serve light refreshments June 25 through August 31. Free picnic areas are located on the grounds.

Admission is all-inclusive and parking is free. Tickets are $7.50 for adults; $3.50 for children 6-12 and youngsters under age 6 are admitted free. Members in the Friends of Old Sturbridge Village are admitted free. Major credit cards are honored.

THE REV. JOSEPH S. MOSTARDI, O.S.A. recently spent three days at Austin Preparatory School in Reading giving a retreat to the students of that school. Father Mostardi is the chaplain of Monsignor Bonner High School in Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania, and is Vocation Director for the Augustinian Fathers. He is seen here with Austin's chaplain, Rev. Thomas Meehan, O.S.A., who arranged the retreat.

Professional Secretaries meet

Tuesday, April 26, Professional Secretaries International (PSI), the Route 128 Chapter, will sponsor a Secretaries Week/Executives-Night event at the Henderson House of Northeastern University, 99 Westcliff Road, Weston. The social hour will start at 5:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m. for reservations, please call Florence Muldoon at 449-2000 extension 2911 by Friday, April 22.

The program after dinner will consist of a panel discussion by two executives and two PSI secretaries, with a member of the Route 128 Chapter as Moderator. The subject of the panel discussion will be "Let's Build a Team." For further information you may call Dorothy Crowell at 933-6048 (Woburn).

Refrigerators

The purpose of a refrigerator is to keep foods cold and prolong their quality. When operating at the proper temperature, the refrigerator can store large quantities of foods and cut down on spoilage and waste, which helps to save both money and time.

According to home economists from Whirlpool

Corporation, proper temperatures in the refrigerator section should be 34° to 40°F. (door temperatures may be slightly higher). The meat holder should be 29° to 31°F., and crispers should be 35° to 36°F.

Here's how to check the temperature of your refrigerator:

- Refrigerator Section—

Place several glasses of water in various areas of the refrigerator interior and inner door. Let cool for at least 24 hours. Check temperatures with an accurate thermometer placed in the water.

If you find temperatures in your unit are too high or low, you are not getting the maximum storage for your foods.

Vacation week activity

A visit to a real working farm

Take about twenty grade school children watching ten piglets being carried into a barn and what do you get? A lot of squealing. That was the sound at Macomber Farm in Framingham, Massachusetts last week as manager Roger Lauze oversaw the unloading of the piglets for Macomber Farm's season opening, April 1st. These piglets are on loan from Parson's farm in Hadley, Mass.

That was just one activity at Macomber that day as the staff prepared for this season's opening. Now in its third season, Macomber Farm is a working farm operated by the Mass. SPCA. The nine barns of animals and exhibits occupy 46 acres of the old Macomber Estate in Framingham, just off Route 9, halfway between Boston and Worcester.

Each barn is devoted to different domestic animals. Horses, cows (at least seven breeds), sheep, goats, pigs, chickens and turkeys are all there in numbers.

The farm was begun by the Mass. SPCA to create a greater understanding of the needs of animals. In addition to just getting close to the farm animals (a rare occurrence these days for most children), educational and computer games, exhibits and demonstrations invite the active participation of farmgoers.

In one such game, children pull on a wagon to find out exactly how much power is meant by one horsepower. In another, a video terminal demonstrates horse body language. A live demonstration called "Steeds in Action" shows how different breeds of horses have been developed for different purposes.

And then there is the milking parlor, a definite favorite of visitors. Macomber milks three times during the day so everyone can get in on the action.

"We're just bringing animals and people closer together," says Bob Johnson, Director of Macomber Farm. "People drive by farm animals grazing in their fields every day, but fewer and fewer of us are aware of the interdependence of man and animals. Here at Macomber, visitors experience a farm and, hopefully, leave with an increased sensitivity towards the needs of all animals."

Adds Roger Lauze, Farm Manager, "We do want people to better understand farm animals, and we have many activities and exhibits that will insure kids and adults will have fun at Macomber Farm". For the inner-city children, just touching a pig seemed to be fun enough.

Macomber Farm is located off Route 9 on Salem End Road in Framingham, Mass.; (take Exit 12 to Route 9 East off the Mass Pike, Route 90) and is open daily 9:30 to 5:00 and Saturday-Sunday 10:00 to 6:00. For more information, call (617) 879-5345.

Railroad enthusiast excursion

Southern New Hampshire in the springtime is the theme for the special, one-day railroad excursion on Saturday, April 23, to be sponsored by the Massachusetts Bay Railroad Enthusiasts, Inc. Announcing the trip, David Derow, the group's vice president, explained that the specially-chartered, Diesel-powered Boston & Maine train, dubbed The Crotched Mountain Ltd., will depart from Boston's North Station at 8:00 A.M., and make stops for passengers at Winchester at 8:15, North Billerica at 8:32, Lowell at 8:40, and Nashua, N.H., at 9:00.

An early evening return is scheduled following a fun-filled day in the country.

Derow said that the Railroad Enthusiasts' winter excursion to New Hampshire this past February proved so successful that a spring excursion was scheduled by popular demand. The route will be over the Boston & Maine's scenic, rural branchline through the Monadnock Region to Bennington, N.H., with a transfer to nearby Crotched Mountain for an afternoon in the country, with an optional barbequed chicken luncheon in the Crotched Mountain Ski Area dining facility. Old-fashioned country amusements will include horse-drawn hayrides, weather permitting. An optional bus side trip to Hillsborough will be offered to view the former B&M covered bridge over the Contoocook River and to visit Kemp's Mack Museum, home of over 100 vintage commercial vehicles. According to Derow, this is a rare opportunity, as the last passenger train to use this picturesque line was the excursion run fifteen years ago by the same group.

The Railroad Enthusiasts were the first group to organize and operate "fantrips" for railfans and the general public, and, for nearly fifty years, they have run special trains to scenic and historical locations in the Northeast. The Crotched Mountain Ltd. will be the twentieth special excursion train sponsored by the Mass. Bay RRE in the past five years; these special trains having operated to destinations in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, and New York State.

Special, inflation-fighting, discount fares for The Crotched Mountain Ltd. will be available through April 14 — adults, $34.95; children, $22.95. Early reservations are encouraged; after April 14, there will be a $5.00 price increase. The luncheon at Crotched Mountain will cost an additional $5.95, and the Hillsborough side trip will cost $6.95.

For more information about this unique, one-day, energy-efficient railroad excursion, call (617) 277-2843 in the Boston area, or write: Mass. Bay Railroad Enthusiasts, Inc., Trip Committee, P.O. Box 208, East Walpole, Ma. 02322.

Heart Health

Lawrence Memorial

"To Your Heart's Content", a free, two-session seminar for the public, will be presented on two consecutive Wednesdays, April 20 and April 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford School of Nursing, 170 Governors Avenue, Medford.

The topic of the first session is "Heart Fitness." Pamela Bouchard, R.N., LMH Cardiac Rehabilitative Clinical Specialist, will tell participants the steps that are necessary for maintaining a healthier heart, and will help participants to set up their own exercise programs. The session will also include a demonstration of different types of exercises that can promote cardiovascular fitness.

What necessary steps should you take to reduce your risks for further heart problems after a heart attack? How can you cope with heart disease and readjust to family activities, work, and daily living? At the April 27 session, entitled "After a Heart Attack", Lawrence D. Baker, M.D., LMH Chief of Cardiology, will address these questions, and will discuss the steps to take to promote rehabilitation and recovery after a heart attack.

Seating for the seminar sessions is limited. To reserve a seat for either session, or for more information, contact the LMH Public Relations Department at 396-9250, ext. 1633.

The University of Massachusetts-Amherst is helping reduce a serious shortage of math and science teachers in our nation's schools with an innovative program developed by the University, private industry, a group of Massachusetts school systems, the State Department of Education and the Massachusetts High Tech Council. The Math-Science-Technology Education Program will recruit math and science graduates to a 14-month program of courses and business internships leading to a masters of education degree and teacher certification at the secondary level. So far, nearly 200 qualified graduates in math and science have applied for 20 openings.

teaching, at least economically. You really would have to be very, very dedicated to teaching to consider it seriously as a career, up 'till now. We hope to change all that."

How will this be accomplished?

"What we've done is gather a consortium of companies from the greater Boston area and a consortium of public school systems from that same area, together with the University of Massachusetts. We have put together a package kind of program in which students spend some time doing paid internships in high-tech industries, some time doing paid internships in public high schools, and some time taking classes with UMass faculty, perhaps also with the education divisions of one or more of the companies."

Among the industries that have joined in the new program, he said, are Hewlett-Packard, Data General, Digital and the First National Bank of Boston.

"The result of all this is that even during the training phase students will get not a huge salary, but certainly more than a livable salary for someone straight out of college. And after that, they will have the option of continuing their part-time employment in participating industries so that they will in subsequent years earn substantially more than a beginning teacher would otherwise. In addition, they will keep their hand in with the companies where they've been doing their internship."

Students will participate in the program for two summers and one academic year, after which, with a master's degree and certification to teach, they will be obligated to commit themselves to remain in teaching for three years. In return, Schultz said, participating companies will continue the students' part-time employment with them for at least those three years.

"After the three years are over, they can go full-time teaching."

they can go full-time industry, they can work out a teaching job within industry, go part-time, fifty-fifty industry-school — whatever they can work out. We think this is attractive because it gives students career options."

In addition to teacher training, students will also learn "the new technology and how it might affect high school teaching and teaching in general in the near future. Things are happening rather rapidly and it's important not only for the high schools of Massachusetts, but also for the companies that are participating that some of this technology be made available to high school students."

The new education program is greatly needed, Schultz said, because in a recent survey, 43 of 50 states reported a shortage of math and science teachers. Of the teachers newly hired in 1981-82, 50 percent didn't meet the minimum certification requirements for the states in which they were hired, but because no one else was available, they were hired anyway.

The federal government is concerned about this situation because of the importance of technology to the military and to the economy, he said.

"If you look at comparative statistics, you find that in the Soviet Union they produce six times as many engineers per year than we do. Children and adolescents in Japan and Germany take four times as many math and science courses by the time they finish high school than even the best prepared of American high school students."

New parent course at Health Center

Couples usually spend eight weeks preparing for a one-day event — childbirth. Then its three days in the hospital with a lot of excitement. Suddenly the parents are on their own with a new infant and little preparation for this 24-hour-a-day responsibility.

To help new parents learn necessary skills in infant care and prevention of accidents and injuries, the Regional Health Center in Wilmington is offering a new course, "Parenting Your Infant" for those with infants from newborn up to five months old.

The five-part course will include the following topics: "Infant Care Skills" including bathing and feeding with tips on how to better understand your infant's needs, with Joni Santos, R.N., pediatric nurse; "Growth and Development of the Newborn" including an "ask the pediatrician" session with David S. Salomon, M.D.; "Nutrition and Feeding Problems" will be discussed by Marilyn M. Pasierb, R. D., M. S., nutritionist; and Eleanor R. Entin, R.N., B.S., will conduct two sessions on "Accident Prevention and Safety" and "Handling Respiratory Emergencies" where she will certify parents in rescue breathing and chokesaving. Mrs. Entin is a certified instructor in CPR and First Aid by the American Red Cross.

This course will be held on Thursday, April 14 through May 12 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. (Parents may bring their infants.) There is a registration fee of $15 per individual or $25 per couple for all five sessions required in advance. This fee includes materials and a respiratory emergencies handbook.

Sharpen your parenting skills while helping your baby to have a healthier safer and happier infancy.

A bereavement group for people who have lost a family member during the past year will be held eight Wednesday afternoons beginning April 13 from 1-2:30 at the Visiting Nurse Association of Middlesex-East, 136 Elm Street, Stoneham. The group is offered without charge and all are welcome.

Nancy Winter, MSW, is leader of the support sessions. She can be called for further details at 438-3770.

Mrs. Winter states that this is a second group which has been held at the agency. Members of the first adopted the name, "You Are Not Alone." The bereavement group is part of the Hospice program of Visiting Nurse Hospice.

College aid isn't growing on trees, but you needn't pay to find it

By Thomas Watterson
Business correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

With many students concerned over federal college loans—even though the amount of money available for this purpose is almost the same as last year—the search for additional financial aid has become fierce.

At the same time, the costs of college continue to go up every year. Some of the more prestigious private colleges are charging more than $12,000 for a year's tuition, room, and board. At some state schools, these costs can run $5,000 or more.

This is where the scholarship-finding services supposedly come in. For fees ranging from $25 to $250, plus, in some cases, a percentage of the first year's scholarship, these services promise to help prospective students and their parents find many of the "hidden" scholarships.

For many, however, this help is probably unnecessary. Many of the scholarships that go unclaimed are designed for specific groups of people: like left-handed redheads, people with a certain last name, or members of a particular ethnic group.

Beyond a research firm, there are several places a student can go to find out about scholarships. Some are free, others cost only a few dollars. Two free places are a high school guidance office and the financial aid office of the college you plan to attend. Another is a fairly well-stocked local library. All of these places should have scholarship guidebooks that list scholarship amounts, special criteria for qualifying, and where to write for a scholarship application.

For a dollar, the American Legion will send a booklet called "Need a Lift." It is a comprehensive list of all scholarship aid, again, with addresses and criteria for eligibility. The booklet can also be obtained through local American Legion posts.

In many cases, notes Donald Chenelle, director of undergraduate admission and university financial aid at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, the scholarship research firms will send a student a list of various funding sources. But he adds that the list will often contain such generally known sources as National Direct Student Loans, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, College Work Study, Guaranteed Loans, and various state grants and loans. Thus the student has paid the search company for a list of perhaps 10 funding sources, six or seven of which are readily available.

Sometimes, Mr. Chenelle says, scholarship research firms have listed financial aid sources that were no longer available, either because the money was cut off or the firm offering the scholarship had gone out of business.

The appeal of these firms, then, seems to be greatest for people who want or need someone else to do their homework for them. Mr. Chenelle recommends that if you fit in this category, you call the colleges you are thinking of attending. Ask someone in the financial aid office if he has heard of a particular search firm and what kind of results students have gotten from it. But, again, that call may result in the student's learning about previously unknown scholarships or other financial aid sources, which would make the scholarship-finding firm unnecessary.

April 15 is still a few weeks away, but even that is too soon for some taxpayers. If you're one of them, there is a way to get more time. By filing on Form 4868, you can get a four-month extension and file as late as Aug. 15. When you do file 4868, you still have to estimate and pay any tax owed before April 15. Otherwise, you might have to pay penalties and interest for late tax payments. A copy of 4868 must accompany your return when you finally do file.

It is also possible to get an extension beyond the four-month period, but for that, you need a good reason. You can tell your tale of woe either in a letter to the IRS or on Form 2688. But this letter or the form must reach the IRS long enough before Aug. 15 so you can still file in case you get turned down.

While you can move your taxpaying into the future, it is also possible to go backward, that is, to make up for tax breaks that may have been missed in previous years. With an amended return (Form 1040X), you can claim deductions or credits which were not claimed before that could have eased your tax bill. In most cases, an amended return must be filed within three years of the year in question.

Asthmatic children can now be helped

Do you have, or do you know, a five or six year old who has asthma? If the answer is yes, the American Lung Association of Middlesex County and the Lawrence Memorial Hospital in Medford are sponsoring a program to help children of this age. It's Captain Wonderlung, a six week educational and conditioning program.

Captain Wonderlung will be held at the Hospital's School of Nursing on Thursday afternoons from 3:30-4:30 p.m., starting April 28th. The registration fee is $10.00.

These hour-long sessions will be conducted by a registered physical therapist. The program is designed to teach the children some basic breathing exercises, correct posture, relaxation techniques and positions, as well as discussions on things that "trigger an asthma episode," feelings associated with the illness, and participation in physical activities-sports.

There will also be some education sessions for parents at this same time. Through education and recreation activities with other children who have asthma, your child will learn to understand the disease and how to cope with it more effectively.

For registration forms or more information, contact the American Lung Association of Middlesex County at 272-2866.

Try growing your own asparagus

UMM. The delicate taste of asparagus! Why not grow some with your other vegetables.

An asparagus bed started from seed takes one year longer than a bed started with roots, which takes three years. Roots can be obtained from a local nursery or mail order nursery. For every twelve plants, twenty-five feet of space is necessary with rows being four to five feet apart. April or May is the time to plant.

Asparagus can be grown in any well drained fertile soil. It favors a slightly acid soil but not below a pH of 6. When garden soil is in a workable condition, dig a trench eighteen inches wide, ten inches deep. Add 5-10-5 fertilizer (5 lbs. per 75 foot row) to organic matter, and mix to the soil that was removed from the trench. Fill the trench with this mixture to six inches below the ground level. Tamp down. Place roots on top, crown side up, two feet apart. Cover with two to three inches of soil. As plants grow, add soil until trench is full.

Asparagus should be fed with a 5-10-5 fertilizer two to three months after planting. Each spring and fall, fertilize again. Mulch around plants to keep weeds out and moisture in. Gently remove weeds because plant's underground stems are easily damaged. In the fall, after leaves have been killed by frost, cut off top growth to ground level and mulch the bed again.

The first two years a root system will develop to feed and support the stalks. The second spring after planting, you can pick a few stalks when they are seven inches high. The third season and thereafter, cut all shoots except thin ones. Shoots should be harvested when they are five to eight inches tall and buds are still tight. If buds begin to open, the spears lose their flavor. Harvest stops when stalks start growing thinner. These thin stalks are left to grow tall and fern-like and will help feed roots.

Harvest asparagus by bending stalks at ground level until they snap. Leave the white part of the stalk in the ground. If asparagus is not to be used immediately, keep stalks upright in water until cooking time.

For more information on growing asparagus, contact the Middlesex County Extension Service, 105 Everett St., Concord, Ma. 01742. Telephone 369-4845 or 862-2380.

Rush to open IRA accounts may shift economic outlook

By Ron Scherer
Business correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

New York

In an effort to circumvent the tax man, Americans are opening up Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) at record rates.

This surge in IRA accounts only two weeks before the final April 15 date for making contributions is bringing smiles to the bankers, brokers, and mutual-fund managers who stand to profit from them. It is a surge, they say, that is beyond their expectations.

In Boston, for example, the Fidelity Group, a mutual-fund complex, says it is opening up 10,000 new IRAs a week, compared with 3,000 a week a year ago. Kate Lorinczi, a Fidelity public-relations official, says: "No one is getting out to lunch. We're manning the telephones."

At Scudder Fund Distributors in New York, Dudley H. Ladd, a senior vice-president, says a huge run of new orders "was more than we expected." Scudder, in fact, has brought some retired personnel back to its offices to help process the work load.

Jamie Shaw at Great Western Financial

they are late — and continue to invest in IRAs — "it could adversely impact the government's tax take in April and May."

Wall Street observers also believe the big surge in investing could help to raise stock prices. "To the extent that they are investing in stocks and bonds, it should help the stock market or help to lower interest rates," Mr. Moskowitz says.

Interviews in most of the major retail brokerage houses and in some large mutual-fund groups indicate investors are putting their money in the stock market. "Last year most of the new money went into our money market fund," says Clark Gates, a Dreyfus Corporation official. "This year a lot of the money is going into funds that invest in equities." Dreyfus is opening up 2,700 new accounts a week.

In part, the surge in new IRAs has occurred because a significantly greater number of individuals are eligible to invest. In 1981, only individuals who were not covered by an employer-sponsored pension plan were eligible to set up an IRA. However, after Congress changed the law, every income earner is now eligible to set one up.

In addition, points out Rick Lawson, assistant vice-president for product management at Security Pacific Bank in Los Angeles, last year the consumer was "bombarded by advertising." This advertising, he says, "created a lot of confusion," since individuals were uneducated about IRAs. Jamie Shaw of Great Western says: "There was such a media blitz last year; it got people confused and they backed off from setting up IRAs." This year, Mr. Lawson says, the consumer is better informed about IRAs.

Across the country, bankers and brokers report a flood of new IRA accounts. At Merrill Lynch, for example, Donald Underwood, manager of retirement plans, says the company is opening up 5,000 new IRA accounts a day, and "The numbers are rising every day." Many people, he notes, are opening up IRA accounts for both 1982 and 1983. And, in some cases, couples are making this investment, which amounts to $4,000 apiece.

The same is true at E. F. Hutton, where Gary Strum, first vice-president, states: "We are doing as well as Merrill or better." As the April 15 deadline approaches, he says, "IRA business is just walking in the door." One young E. F. Hutton account executive has opened up 250 new accounts in the last 3½ weeks — and he has only reached the letter F in his list of customers.

At Shearson-American Express, Richard Weissappel, director of the personal client-services group, says the IRA business is 30 to 35 percent ahead of last year.

Moreover, in the next two weeks everyone expects the business to get better. Comments Mr. Strum, "People tend to wait until the last moment if it involves writing a check."

In addition, advertising is beginning to pick up. Robert Hutchinson, a vice-president at Manufacturers Hanover Trust in New York, says he plans to start running newspaper and magazine ads to spark new interest. So far this year, the bank's IRA accounts are running 50 percent ahead of last year's pace. The same is true at Security Pacific, where, Mr. Lawson says, new accounts are up 50 percent. And in the next two weeks he expects more new accounts, since the bank just completed a mailing to 250,000 credit-card customers that included the suggestion that they fund the investment by borrowing against their line of credit.

For those who truly wait until the last minute, there is still hope. At Charles Schwab & Co., a discount brokerage house, the company plans to stay open until midnight, April 15. "I don't know the number of people who wait until the last day to file a tax return," Mr. Schwab remarked. But he added, "I've done it myself, and I do know the opportunity to list a last-minute deduction would have often been a big help to me."

SCUDDER FUNDS CENTER

Boston By Barth Falkenberg, staff photographer

Mutual fund centers: busy selling IRAs
Corporation, a major thrift institution in California, says the bank has opened up 93 percent more 1982 accounts than 1981 accounts.

Nationwide, this surge in new IRAs is expected to have an impact on the economy. Mitchell Held, an economist with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. says M2, one measure of the nation's money supply, should rise at a slower rate in April because of the surge. And Arnold Moskowitz, an economist at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., says the crush of new IRA accounts could put some downward pressure on interest rates as some of the funds get invested in money-market mutual funds. Also, points out Robert Curtis, vice-president of Dollar Dry Dock Savings Bank, some of the new funds may go toward new mortgages. "It's long-term in nature, so if it's invested in at least a three-year account, there is a likelihood it can be matched to a mortgage."

Another Dean Witter economist, William Sullivan, points out that the boom in IRAs could result in lower tax payments to the government. At the end of March, he says, the US Treasury's cash balances were about $5 billion higher than the Treasury forecast. "This," he says, "either means the government is not spending as much money, or individuals are late filing their tax returns." If

'83 college grads find job offers scarce

By Ron [unclear]
Business correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor

New York
For the class of 1983, this is a tough spring. There's even somewhat less demand for graduates in some technical areas, such as engineering and computer science.

With only two months until graduation, job offers are slow in coming — and for those offered jobs, salary levels are only slightly above those given 1982 graduates.

"This is the toughest year since World War II for college graduates," says John Shingleton, director of placement at Michigan State University.

Adds Linda Pengilly, information assistant at the College Placement Council, "The economy is affecting the job offers students are receiving."

Because of uncertainty over the overall strength or weakness of the economy, many corporations have not made decisions yet on whom they will hire, says Victor Lindquist, director of placement at Northwestern University. "We have a lot of kids who have had interviews who have not heard anything. They haven't received letters of rejection or letters of acceptance."

But in the next four to six weeks, he says, many of the June graduates will know where they will be working.

Mr. Shingleton, who is also the author of a report called "Recruiting Trends," which surveys the hiring intentions of 637 businesses and governmental agencies, estimates that roughly 80 percent of the 1.3 million seniors graduating from colleges or universities this June will find suitable jobs. The remaining 20 percent will either join the ranks of the unemployed, go on to graduate schools, or become "underemployed," that is, take jobs they are overqualified for.

This is not to say that there are not areas of strength. Mr. Shingleton says the demand remains strong for most types of engineers, including mechanical and chemical, as well as computer-science majors. Normally, he notes, such graduates would receive five or six job offers by June. This year they are only getting two or three. Because of the reduced numbers of offers, Ms. Pengilly says, June graduates are making their decisions on which job to take faster.

Not all engineers are in demand. Civil engineers, says Mr. Lindquist, are having a rough time getting job offers, as are architects. Petroleum engineers, he comments, "are not the golden boys they were a few years ago." New jobs in this area, he says, are not running at the same level they were a few years ago, when the oil companies were "trying to dig as many holes as they could."

This is definitely the case at Mobil Corporation, says John Barch, manager of programs and corporate recruiting. In 1980-81, he says, Mobil hired 900 college graduates. Last year, hiring plummeted to 425 college graduates. This year, it will be even lower.

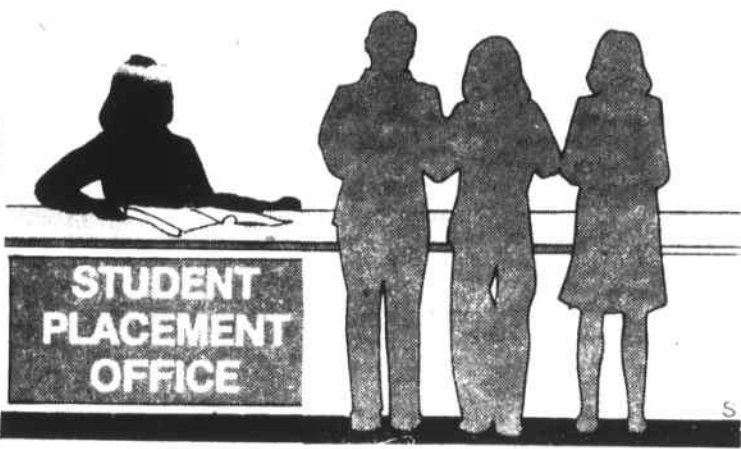

Even in the computer area, says Anne Brandwein, associate professor of statistics and computer sciences at Baruch College in New York, things aren't as rosy as they have been in the past. "Students in computer sciences," she says, "aren't being placed as fast as they used to be." She recounts how one of her graduate students — who has spent 15 to 20 years as a teacher, and has excellent work experience — is having "a terrible time" getting a job.

For some June graduates, however, the prospects this year were bright. Take, for example, Suzanne Thornton, a June graduate at Dartmouth College, located in Hanover, N.H. Ms. Thornton, who is a math major with a good working knowledge of computers, had job offers in New York from Touche Ross, an accounting firm; Morgan Guaranty Trust Company, a bank; and Merrill Lynch & Co. She accepted a job at Merrill Lynch in the municipal-finance area as a research analyst.

"Being a woman and a math major helped me," says Ms. Thornton, who was captain of the women's track team and active in sorority life.

Such outside activities, says Frank Paparella, manager of college relations for Merrill Lynch, are among the traits the broker was looking for when it recruited Ms. Thornton.

A report by Paine Webber's top analysts makes these assessments and helps explain a lot of the difficult-to-understand occurrences taking place lately in the financial markets.

Should investors get out of cash and short-term market instruments and into stocks? Which companies can take advantage of the restructuring of American industry? Which cannot?

These and other key questions are addressed in a publication called, "The forest and the trees: Opportunities for income and growth in bonds and stocks," which is available free from Paine Webber. Write to: P.O. Box 22746, Rochester, New York 14692, and ask for "Viewpoint #91."

The Spring "Pops" Concert of the Reading Choral Society will be presented on Saturday, April 16th, at 8 PM in Fellowship Hall of the Old South United Methodist Church, Reading.

Under the direction of Joann Hodgkins, with Myrtle Lemaire as piano accompanist, the group will be singing a variety of popular songs from "Then and Now", including selections from the 30's through the 50's, as well as songs from "The Fantasticks", "West Side Story", and several written by John Lennon and Paul McCartney.

This music is more than welcome

Proceeds from the concert will benefit the Reading Scholarship Foundation.

In true "Pops" tradition, refreshments will be served at intermission. Tickets may be purchased at the door. For further information, call Phyllis Evensen at 944-6458.

The Mystic Valley Chamber Orchestra will present the third concert pair of its season on April 23 and 24. Marylou Speaker Churchill will be the featured soloist. Mrs. Churchill is Principal 2nd violinist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, where she has played since 1970. On this occasion, she has chosen to perform the Beethoven Violin Concerto, one of the best known of all classical works.

Guest Conductor Ronald Feldman, also a member of the Boston Symphony, has programmed Brahms' Tragic Overture and Stravinsky's Divertimento from "The Fairy's Kiss" to round out what promises to be a particularly rewarding and exciting program.

The MVCO will present these concerts on Saturday, April 23 at 8 PM and on Sunday, April 24 at 4 PM. The Saturday evening concert is at the Arlington Town Hall (730 Mass. Ave.). The Sunday afternoon concert is at Sanders Theatre, Harvard University.

Tickets are available at the door or by calling 935-6438.

THEATER:

Woburn resident David Davidson, formerly of North Reading, has been cast as Noah Claypole, the undertaker's assistant, in the North Reading Theatre Workshop production of "Oliver!"

With an adult cast and chorus of about forty people, and a children's chorus even larger, "Oliver!" promises to be another impressive production in the NRTW tradition.

Directed and choreographed by Paul Greene, "Oliver!" will be performed on May 7, 13 and 14 at 8 PM, and on May 8 at 5 PM at the Daniel Shay Auditorium, North Reading High School, Rt. 62, North Reading. All tickets will be reserved seating and may be obtained at the door, or by contacting the Greens, 24 Haverhill St., North Reading. Group rates, as well as student and senior citizen discounts are available.

Huntington Theatre Company will present the first major American production in forty-five years of J.B. Priestley's "Time and the Conways" from April 23rd through May 14th. Priestley's poignant and perceptive drama about a middle-class family explores the events and decisions of one critical day and insightfully reveals their consequence twenty years later. The Huntington Theatre Company stages its productions at Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Ave. in Boston.

The Samaritans is a suicide prevention service staffed by carefully selected and trained volunteers.

It is not a religious organization.

Once enough money and volunteers are recruited, the North Shore center will open. (This is hoped to happen within the month.)

The Samaritans offer befriending, rather than counseling. Except in a medical emergency, the most urgent need of a person in a suicidal crisis is for someone to talk to in confidence. The Samaritans try to meet that need by making sure there is always someone ready to listen.

Samaritan volunteers are asked to give five hours a week and a monthly overnight shift for at least a year.

No previous experience or special education is required. What is most important is the ability to listen without making judgements or giving unwanted advice.

If you would like to make a donation or volunteer, call 744-5000 or 688-6607, or write to the Samaritans, 90 Highland Ave., Salem, Mass. 01970.

From music to lasers, from drama to harbor cruises, COMING ATTRACTIONS has something for everyone. If we don't, then write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. We have a large capacity for anything new or old.
